At the scene when the river goes green

By Matt Lindner | FOR REDEYE

It's one thing to watch the Chicago River being dyed green from high above or from either side of the water. But to hang out on a boat alongside the speedboats dumping the dye?

"It's a little less crowded and a lot more fun, I think," said Casey O'Brien, a member of the Shannon Rovers Irish Pipe Band.

O'Brien and the Rovers played on the only boat allowed inside the security zone where the river was being dyed Saturday morning. The boat, owned by Chicago-based Shoreline Sightseeing, parked itself right alongside the two speedboats that turned the river green.

Chip Collopy, co-owner of Shoreline, said it's the first time any boat has been allowed inside the security zone while the river was being dyed.

"It's through the plumbers union and the Shannon Rovers," he said. "They are the ones that organized the whole thing."

The end result was a different way of experiencing a Chicago tradition.

As the speedboats worked to dump the dye into the river, doing laps to make sure it spread equally, O'Brien and his fellow Rovers played on, entertaining the masses on either side of the river while being awed by their surroundings.

It was a uniquely Chicago scene: the kilted bagpipers juxtaposed against the lime-green river on a chilly March morning.

"It's certainly a different perspective than we usually get," O'Brien said. "We're usually just playing on the side, so being out on the river is certainly a unique experience."

Collopy and his employees had to work hard to give him that experience. He said that while the winter has been hard on his boats, there was never any doubt that they'd be ready in time for St. Patrick's Day.

"We were iced in until last week," he said. "It happens every year. It was certainly a little longer winter than we're accustomed to. We have a great staff that takes care of the boats."

Near the beginning of the film "Paycheck to Paycheck: The Life & Times of Katrina Gilbert," a teacher at a day care center asks her charges: "Good choices get you what?"

"Good results!" the kids all say.

Try telling that to Katrina Gilbert, who made good choices—or at least didn't make terrible ones—and still barely keeps her head above water.

Gilbert, a nursing assistant and single mother of three in Tennessee, is a walking representation of the self-perpetuating nature of poverty, making her the ideal subject of this documentary from HBO and Maria Shriver.

"Paycheck" avoids direct political posturing. But it seems engineered to dismantle common conservative talking points.

For one thing, a wedding was not a ticket to the good life—Gilbert's husband's addiction to painkillers destroyed the relationship and left the family penniless.

They remain separated but not divorced throughout the movie, apparently because divorce is too expensive. Gilbert struggles to get child support for their children, since her husband has a hard time finding work.

Any objections to the Earned Income Tax Credit are meant to evaporate when we see the glee on Gilbert's face after she gets her tax refund. "I can pay off my car!" she exclaims, or maybe get something for her kids, who didn't get birthday presents over the past year.

The word "Obamacare" is never spoken, but Gilbert's poor health and lack of insurance are presented as nearly insurmountable barriers to success. She had to drop out of college due to health problems; when she tries to re-enroll she apparently can't get financial aid until she proves that her health problems are real. She has constant headaches, panic attacks and a thyroid that has been "swollen for months;" she can't begin to afford the more than $400 the pharmacy charges her for medication—"I had to pick and choose which ones to get."

Paycheck to Paycheck:
The Life & Times of Katrina
Gilbert 8 p.m. Monday, HBO
Free on hbo.com through March 24

Subsidized day care keeps Gilbert from having to use most of her paycheck on child care, and Head Start appears to be the best way to care for her son, who is exhibiting obsessive-compulsive tendencies.

At times, Gilbert seems like a saint: supporting three kids, her estranged husband, her new boyfriend and a litter of kittens; living in a trailer park, then a mildewed, rotting house; spoon-feeding and singing Hank Williams with her charges at the nursing home. She hardly so much as swears in frustration. The most selfish thing she does—and I use that term extremely loosely—is to treat herself to a birthday visit to the hair salon.

That's surely on purpose. The point of the documentary is to show that you can do everything right and still find yourself forced to sell the family dog on Craigslist. But the less angelic among us deserve sympathy too.

Hold that card

Chicago Tribune

Rarely a day passes that First American Bank doesn't hear from customers worried about an unfamiliar transaction on a debit card. But Feb. 10 was different.

The Elk Grove Village-based institution heard from 11 customers claiming they had noticed suspicious transactions in their checking accounts.

"Whenever we get calls like that, we see if there's a pattern of charges," said Christi Childers, associate general counsel and compliance officer at the bank. "In this situation, we looked at those different accounts and determined that 'Chi Taxi' was a common point of compromise."

First American Bank, which has nearly 50 branches in the Chicago area and $3.4 billion in assets, filed a complaint Feb. 12 with the city of Chicago's Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection, alleging what it called a "pattern of fraudulent transactions" on consumers' debit cards after they used them to pay for taxis.

On Feb. 28, it publicly complained—through a news release, on its website and later on its Facebook page—that MasterCard, the debit card company used by the bank's customers, and Bank of America Merchant Services, which processed payments for the taxis, weren't doing enough to stop people who were trying to raid their customers' checking accounts.

More than two weeks later, the privately held bank still recommends that customers not use debit or credit cards in local taxis until the situation is resolved.

"When a 'Chi Taxi' transaction comes through, we're still closing down cards and reissuing cards," Childers said. "We haven't received any indication that the breach has been stopped."

First American Bank says that, as of Feb. 28, it has closed and reissued 227 cards, including for customers who have merely used them in taxis. The bank estimated that, on those closed cards, there have been 478 "test and denied" transactions, which likely were attempts to buy more than $64,000 in goods and services. Childers said Thursday that she didn't have any more recent numbers.

The bank has an employee who every day looks at transactions mentioning "Chi Taxi."

ROADSIDE STANDOFF

Suspect in custody after eight-hour faceoff with police

Chicago Tribune

A man thought to be a suspect in a slaying in Georgia led authorities on a chase Sunday through the South Suburbs and onto Lake Shore Drive, where a crash and standoff paralyzed traffic along one of Chicago's most heavily traveled roadways for more than eight hours, police said.

The standoff, which ended late Sunday when police took the suspect away on a stretcher, had backed up traffic for miles in either direction. Police had hemmed in the suspect's car after it crashed near Fullerton Avenue and were negotiating with him to surrender. Witnesses said they saw police fire on the vehicle, but police hadn't commented on the situation.

CTA buses along the drive were rerouted, motorists crossed grassy medians along Lake Shore Drive to exit by driving the wrong way down entrance ramps and traffic was moving at a crawl along other streets just west of the drive.

Authorities were saying little about the standoff, but witnesses who happened upon the crash scene as it was unfolding described seeing a vehicle that was smashed in the front and back as police officers drew closer to it.

"Oh my goodness, there are guns drawn," said Jennifer Okray, who said her family turned a curve on southbound Lake Shore Drive near Fullerton Parkway around the time of the 1 p.m. crash. "There are at least 40 emergency vehicles out there."

Pat Ryan said he and his three children were also traveling south on Lake Shore Drive near the crash site and saw 15 to 20 police vehicles nearby.

"I started honking my horn because people were stopping and blocking traffic," he said.

The chaos and confusion began when police in Harvey, after receiving information from authorities in Georgia about a recent homicide, spotted a vehicle linked to that killing at about 12:30 p.m. The driver sped off, prompting the chase that led to the crash and

“We don’t want him to be hurt, but we want justice to be served as well.”

—Lastella Felton, sister of the suspect, Joseph Andrew Felton Jr.

The man wanted in the killing, Joseph Andrew Felton Jr., 43, was being sought on a murder warrant in the killing of his wife, Sheray Latrist Felton, who was found dead

Saturday in her home in Hampton, Ga.

Authorities in Chicago hadn't identified the driver of the crashed car as of late Sunday, but Felton's sister was at the scene.

Lastella Felton said that her brother was the driver and that she was encouraging him to surrender.

"We were shocked that he was in Chicago," she said.

Joseph Felton, one of four siblings born and raised in Chicago, moved to Atlanta with his wife about seven months ago, his sister said.

In May 2001, according to court records, Felton was sentenced in Cook County criminal court to 13 years in prison for attempted murder. Before that, he received probation for attempted murder in 1991. In 1999, he was arrested on a charge of domestic battery in Cook County, according to court records.

"We don't want him to be hurt," Lastella Felton said, "but we want justice to be served as well.”

She said she spoke to him on the phone Sunday afternoon during the standoff, saying he was “very discombobulated” and may have cut his wrist in the crash.

“He’s just afraid,” she said.

Elsewhere across the city, the standoff reverberated in ways large and small.

The Chicago Shakespeare Theater had to delay its 2 p.m. Sunday matinee of “Gypsy” because a conductor and several actors were stuck in traffic because of the Lake Shore Drive shutdown. The production got underway at 2:25 p.m. after the conductor was “whisked” to the orchestra loft and the music began before she was even seated at the piano, a theater spokeswoman said in an email.

At the Lyric Opera, a late orchestra member dashing through the parking garage said he jumped a curb to get off Lake Shore Drive in order to make a 2 p.m. performance, which started on time.

Parishioners on their way to a service at Holy Name Cathedral had to shift gears while traveling from Edgewater and finding closed Lake Shore Drive entrance ramps. Bob Backis and his wife parked their car near Wilson Avenue and hopped on the Red Line.

“We were determined to try to make it down any way we could,” said Backis, who dashed up the cathedral steps 15 minutes after the ceremony started.

Amtrak's got a novel idea

New Writer's Residency hopes inspiration is just one free train trip away

Chicago Tribune

Inspiration can be found in surprising places, even on a train, where thoughts of greatness are free to gush from the brain.

Officials at Amtrak, which is more versed in delays than in Dickens, nevertheless believe that the clicketyclack of tracks and fingers tapping on keyboards are a perfect match. (And not a bad marketing tool either.)

The government-funded national passenger railroad has launched the Amtrak Writer's Residency. Storytellers and aspiring writers from all over are hoping to hop on board.

Amtrak is borrowing a page from ivory-tower universities, with their fellowships that include office space and libraries to poets and other scribes.

But the fertile palette that Amtrak will provide is America passing through the picture windows of trains, which get closer to the action than just about any highway.

"The idea is to provide an inspirational space for writing," said Julia Quinn, Amtrak's director of social media.

So while transportation providers here in the Chicago area such as Metra rely on the Internet primarily to list schedules and post notices about late and canceled trains, and the CTA occasionally uses its Twitter account to argue against tweets that blast the transit agency's service, Amtrak's blog is focused on

An Amtrak train passes near Burns Harbor, Ind., in October. ZBIGNIEW BZDAK/TRIBUNE

"leveraging the visual product that we have," Quinn said.

"Social media provides a very unique venue to tell our story," she added.

Selected participants in the writer's residency will receive a free round trip—including a private sleeper roomette and meals—on any of Amtrak's 15 long-distance routes. Depending on the route, trips will take two to five days.

The options include the famous California Zephyr, which snakes through the Rocky Mountains on the trip between Chicago and San Francisco; the equally scenic Cascades route past Mount St. Helens and across the Columbia River Gorge in the Pacific Northwest; or the Capitol Limited between Chicago and Washington, D.C.

The residency was announced on Amtrak's blog March 8. More than 10,000 applications had been submitted as of Friday, Amtrak spokeswoman Kimberly Woods said.

Applications, which must include an essay, will be accepted through March 2015. A link is at blog.amtrak.com.

Crimeans vote to quit Ukraine for Russia

SIMFEROPOL, Ukraine Russian state media said Crimeans voted overwhelmingly to break with Ukraine and join Russia on Sunday, as Kiev accused Moscow of pouring forces into the peninsula and warned separatist leaders "the ground will burn under their feet."

With more than half the votes counted, 95.5 percent had chosen the option of annexation by Moscow, the head of the referendum commission, Mikhail Malyshev, said two hours after polls closed. Turnout was 83 percent, he added—a high figure given that many who opposed the move had said they would boycott the vote.

Western powers and leaders in Kiev denounced it as a sham.

Underlining how Moscow's military takeover of the peninsula two weeks ago has driven Russia and the West into a crisis with echoes of the Cold War, Vladimir Putin and President Obama spoke by telephone and, according to the Kremlin, the Russian and U.S. presidents agreed on a need to cooperate to stabilize Ukraine.

"This referendum is contrary to Ukraine's constitution," a White House spokesman said. "The international community will not recognize the results of a poll administered under threats of violence and intimidation from a Russian military intervention that violates international law."

The Kremlin said Putin told Obama the referendum was legitimate and he expressed concern about the Ukrainian government's failure to stamp out violence against Russian speakers in the country.

"Vladimir Vladimirovich Putin drew attention to the inability and unwillingness of the present authorities in Kiev to curb rampant violence by ultra-nationalist and radical groups that destabilize the situation and terrorize civilians, including the Russian-speaking population," the Kremlin said.

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry told Moscow that Washington would not accept the outcome of the vote in the region.

Detroit rocked!

Hossa, Hawks take their anger out on Wings

By Chris Sosa | REDEYE

Chicago and Detroit don't need brackets, Cinderellas or buzzer-beaters to get their madness on. All the bad blood from 90-plus years of facing each other is plenty. Take Sunday's game at the United Center, where the Hawks came out on top, 4-1.

CHSOSA@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYESPORTSCH

FIRST PERIOD

About five minutes in, Corey Crawford makes a pair of huge saves on Detroit's Luke Glendening. Ahem, the Wings had five shots all period.

Madness meter: 3

Late in the period, Patrick Sharp comes out of the penalty box and immediately smashes a Red Wing player into the corner boards. Nobody puts Sharp in the penalty box. Nobody!

Madness meter: 2

Eight "De-troit sucks!" chants erupted during the period. Yep, Chicago still hates this team.

Madness meter: 4

Ben Smith (front) scores Sunday. NUCCIODINUZZI/TRIBUNE

SECOND PERIOD

Nick Leddy gives the Hawks a 1-0 lead with a low slap shot through traffic. It's his first goal since Feb. 3. Though there was that Olympic break, so we'll let this one slide.

Madness meter: 3

Detroit ties the game at 1 on a power play. Officially, the goal goes to Gustav Nyquist. Unofficially, it goes to Brent Seabrook's skate. D'oh.

Detroit ties the game at 1 on a power play. Officially, the goal goes to Gustav Nyquist. Unofficially, it goes to Brent Seabrook's skate. D'oh.

Madness meter: 4

THIRD PERIOD

Andrew Shaw and Luke Glendening each earn penalties despite being nowhere near the play. Was it worth it, guys? Wait, never mind.

Madness meter: 3

Marian Hossa streaks in from the right and calmly slips one past Wings goalie Jimmy Howard. Looks like he returned from his injury just in time.

Madness meter: 4

Aaaaaand Jonathan Toews scores short-handed to put this 4-1 Blackhawks victory to bed. With an assist from Hossa. Pretty much a perfect night.

Red Wings won't miss you, Chicago

Scott Bolohan

If you were like me, the best part of "True Detective" wasn't watching it every week. It was talking about the show afterward, reading 20 articles on every episode and coming up with your own theories (seriously, Maggie was involved, right? So many unanswered questions).

But in the end, what we got was a lot more straightforward. It was just about two detectives and a crime.

It reminds me of the Blackhawks-Red Wings rivalry. It's over now. And the best parts have always been in your head.

I grew up in Detroit watching the Red Wings win four Cups. They were the best thing about being in Detroit. And it was made even better by our biggest rivalry, one so fierce the city would tune in for every game, expecting blood to spill. We hated not just the team and its players, but the city because they liked that team.

Of course, I'm talking about the Colorado Avalanche. The Blackhawks weren't a rival. There was no "Chicago sucks" chant at the games because the Blackhawks didn't matter. They weren't even a little brother. They barely existed. But to the Hawks, the Wings were the bad guy.

And then the Blackhawks started winning.

In recent years the teams met in the playoffs and a real rivalry did begin to develop. But pucks are a flat circle, and the teams' fortunes were completely changed when the Hawks beat the Wings in overtime of Game 7 to go to the Stanley Cup Final. And what always happens between two rivals happened: reality.

Now the Wings are in danger of not making the playoffs for the first time in more than two decades. Frankly, they're not very good. And if the Hawks don't win another Cup this year, it's a disappointment. The Hawks are now the old Wings. And the Wings are the old Hawks. Everything they've done or will do is going to happen over and over again.

With Detroit joining the Eastern Conference, two meetings a year mean even less. While it's good to see Hawks fans commit to something, like hating the Wings, the rivalry is dead. The Hawks got their guy. The Yellow King might still be out there. And now it's the St. Louis Blues. Or Maggie. I mean, right?

1	What do you call the day after Selection Sunday?	O'Bracketology Monday! Green beer and brackets! Doesn't get any better, unless Sabrina from the office wants to get busy!	Mother [bleeping] March Madness Monday.	I Can't Believe I Drank That Much Green Beer Monday.	Mope Monday—a Northwestern tradition since 1939.	Mayhem Monday. Everyone's in such a rush to finish their bracket, the Internet may come crashing down.
2	How many brackets is the right amount to fill out?	You can't have enough enough brackets! Does Lady Gaga have enough pairs of shoes? I think NDT!	Be an adult. Take pride in your choices: Pick one and stick with it.	Equal to the number of green beers as I drank this weekend. Not sure how many, but I kept hearing "just one more."	However many it takes to win Buffett's Billion-Dollar bracket.	Just one. Get it right the first time.
3	St. Patrick's Day is to Chicago sports as Irish whiskey is to Beverly residents. Mother's milk, my friends. May the road rise to greet you when you pass out cold.	... [vomits all over Clark Street].	... drinking green beer is to hanging out in downtown Chicago. You couldn't have one without the other.	St. Patrick's Day has temporarily rendered me incapable of answering tricky analogy questions.	Nothing. Once a year everything's green and everyone is Irish for a day. What can compare?
4	What's Julius Peppers' first order of business as a Green Bay Packer?	Get that money in a bank account ASAP! Then, see if that beat-up body can fake it for another season or two.	Get some cheese to go with that Peppers.	Getting his jersey sized? That disgusting green jersey. I never want to see anything green again. Ever.	Cash his paycheck. (Second order of business: Coast.)	Hide all evidence of his Bears days. Those Packers fans are crazy.
5	Which Bear is happiest Charles Tillman is back?	Boo Bear? How about Yogi Bear? Papa Bear? What about Honey Bear? Bear essentials? Regardless ... BEAR DOWN!	Martellus Bennett, because "The Black Unicorn and Peanut" sounds like the crime-fighting duo this town deserves.	Mrs. Tillman. Now shut up and let me sleep off this hangover.	Charles Tillman.	Tim Jennings. He needs his wingman.

Big Ten puts six teams in the Big Dance

Chicago Tribune

The Big Ten tournament had a clear winner in Michigan State, and the conference put six teams in the NCAA Tournament. Let's wade into the murkier waters of Big Ten winners and losers Sunday.

Winner: Nebraska

Not only was #Nebrasketball validated with an 11th seed (and not a play-in game), the Huskers could face in-state rival Creighton in the round of 32. If that happens, Nebraska ceases to be a football state. For two hours.

Loser: Iowa

Three weeks ago, bracketologists viewed Iowa as a No. 6 seed. But by crumbling down the stretch—five losses in six games—and then falling to Northwestern in the conference tournament, Iowa barely made the tournament. The Hawkeyes have to beat Tennessee on Wednesday in Dayton, Ohio, to make the field of 64.

Winner: Wisconsin

Not only are the Badgers a No. 2 seed, not only will they face American (RPI: 122) in the round of 64, they can practically bike to the venue. They'll head 78 miles east to Milwaukee to take on the Patriot League opponent.

Loser: Ohio State

The No. 6 seed seems a tad low, and the Buckeyes' first-round opponent, Dayton, cannot please Buckeyes coach Thad Matta.

Winner: Michigan

The selection committee rewarded the Wolverines for a 15-3 performance in Big Ten play (and/or a 10-4 record vs. RPI Top 50).

Loser: The Big Ten Tourney

Michigan State plows through its three opponents in Indianapolis and does no better than a No. 4 seed?

'Write your own [BLEEPING] SONGS'

The Pretty Reckless singer Taylor Momsen wants artists to plug it in and crank it up

By Matt Pais | REDEYE

Like many popular young female singers these days, Taylor Momsen has been criticized for incorporating sexuality into her performances, photos and videos. The Pretty Reckless singer sees a bit of a double standard there.

"I can see Robert Plant's [bleep]!" she exclaims of the Led Zeppelin frontman's sometimes-revealing attire. "I don't know if anyone is aware of that, but I don't know why everyone just focuses on women."

In large sunglasses, an Eric Clapton T-shirt and knees popping out of torn jeans upstairs at the House of Blues before a late October performance, the 20-year-old artist actually looks more like Plant or Kurt Cobain than the controversial musician who wraps a snake around her naked body in the video for the band's single "Going to Hell." The hard-rocking cut is the title track to the band's sophomore album, out Tuesday.

Momsen—perhaps best known for her time on "Gossip Girl," though she's all about music now—says the wardrobe is the only difference between her on-stage and off-stage personality. That disconnect notwithstanding, it's good to have a rock band that, as Momsen says, wants to "just crank to 10 and play."

Watch video from this interview at redeyechicago.com.

You said that parents have called the cops during your shows about things being inappropriate. What are they taking issue with?

That was a show somewhere overseas, and a fan jumped onstage and got naked and was dancing, and the cops got called. Weirdly I think it was a boy whose dad was like, "This is inappropriate for my son to see" [Laughs.]

I'm sure the kid was like [whispering], "Dad, stop!"

[Whispers.] "Shh, shh, it's fine!" Whatever.

It's live rock and roll. You never really know what's going to happen, which is what keeps it entertaining.

There have been so many times with rock bands that you hear people saying, "Mothers, lock up your daughters," but you don't often hear, "Mothers, lock up your sons."

[Laughs.] "Mothers, lock up your sons," yeah. That was a new one for us, but you never know.

You toured with Guns N' Roses. What did you learn from Axl Rose, for better or worse?

We've played with so many people now at this point that really just playing with acts that have been doing it for so long, it really makes you step up your game. Particularly Axl's voice was just insane. He can go out for two, three hours every night and just wail. And it was like, "OK, I gotta go on before that, so I gotta not suck tonight."

Does it take a long time to warm up your voice to get to that point, or can you turn it on whenever you need it?

[Laughs.] I don't do anything. I don't have any [techniques]. Everyone always asks me that. I drink a drink and smoke a cigarette and walk on stage. That's my pre-show ritual.

Why do you think there aren't more rock bands out there now that, for lack of a better term, sound like they have some balls?

I don't know. I think music's kind of cyclical. I think pop always exists and once in a while, every 10 or 20 years or however long it is, a band comes back in and guitar's just cooler than everything. Crank it to 10 and it just takes over. There's definitely a lack of rock bands right now, and rock could definitely use a resurgence, but we hope to be a part of that.

You're focusing on music, not acting, right now. Maybe it's because I never watched "Gossip Girl," but I find it silly that you have to continually defend the fact that your job when you were acting was not you and what you do in reality is you. Does that blow your mind time and time again?

It's a little weird. I guess it makes sense. People see you on television or in tabloids or pictures or whatever and they think they're seeing you as a person, and they don't realize that that picture was taken and I'm in a costume. It makes sense, but it's pretty much gone away. The people coming to shows aren't asking me about that. They're here to see a rock show and go nuts.

If you could choose to A) Never be asked about the acting stuff anymore or B) Never be asked about Miley Cyrus anymore, which would you pick?

[Laughs.] How about both? Just ask me about the new record. But Miley's really sweet. She's actually a good friend of mine, so I have nothing bad to say about her.

What has to happen for society to get over that fixation on female artists' sexuality?

I don't think we ever will. Especially with the Internet age, it's just something to talk about and it's an escape for people's real lives to talk about stupid, frivolous drama.

How can we differentiate artists who are doing something because that's who they are and artists who do something because it's calculated and part of a product?

I think the first thing is write your own [bleeping] songs, man. You don't need 10 writers to write one line.

Taylor Momsen of The Pretty Reckless

"I'll get up in the crowd and that's super fun, but they always go for the hair. I'm like, 'I've got wristbands on, take something else! It hurts! Stay away from my hair!'"

Country girl on her own

Chicago Tribune

Sugarland frontwoman Jennifer Nettles decided to make a solo album years ago, but superstar careers are like ocean liners—difficult to turn around. Nettles and sometime partner Kristian Bush have sold more than 10 million albums as Sugarland, which was no small thing to walk away from, even when you want to.

Bush went to work on his own material; Nettles took longer to get going, then did everything all at once. She had a baby (Magnus, now 15 months old), made a record (“That Girl,” now two months old) and took to the road.

“That Girl,” which Nettles recorded in Malibu with a team headed by bearded guru Rick Rubin, is a small-scale, rootsy country-soul album, a step back from her glossier, more commercial work in Sugarland.

In dozens of recent interviews, Nettles has neatly sidestepped questions about a potential Sugarland reunion, and this one is no different. Cheery and talkative in a phone interview, she didn’t seem evasive, just uncertain. Some edited highlights from the conversation follow.

On deciding to go solo:

Like most things with me, there wasn’t necessarily an “aha” moment, just lots of building up. ... Back as early as when we were in promotion for [2010 Sugarland album] “The Incredible Machine,” I started having these rumblings and conversations within myself and our organization, “Okay, I’m feeling this coming for me. I’m feeling the need for something different.” To make a big change, it can take a while to make something happen, so I’m glad I [started] as early as I did.

Rick Rubin, nice guy:

He was super open, very kind. My first experience with him was over the phone. We started a dialog together. I shared with him what I was hoping for this album, that I wanted it to be open, that I wanted it to be raw, that I wanted to bring a different kind of soul and spirit into country music that I was yearning for and hoped I would be able to provide. ... The whole thing was very collaborative. From the beginning, he put me at ease.

On whether “That Girl” has an authenticity that’s missing from Sugarland albums:

No, I wouldn’t say it was missing from Sugarland albums, but I will say that I definitely intentionally wanted to do something different. ... What happens with success, it’s like you can become a caricature of yourself. You get a little bit of success, especially where radio is concerned, and they say, “OK, everything you do, do just like that, but bigger.” And suddenly features are distorted and everything is exaggerated. And while I love Sugarland ... I wanted to do something different. There was more as a writer, more for me vocally and more I wanted to show my fans. ... It’s two completely different intentions.

Zooey and Prince have struck again!

Los Angeles Times

It looks like Prince and Queen Adorkable don't want their reign as earworm providers to end.

The Purple One partnered with actress-singer Zooey Deschanel on the spacing-averse titled song, "FALLINLOVE2NITE," performing a portion of it on Deschanel's Fox comedy "New Girl" back in February—aka the kind-of-a-big-deal post-Super Bowl episode that brought in a whopping 25.8 million viewers.

In the episode, Deschanel's character, Jess, is invited to a mansion party thrown by Prince that her friends, like any die-hard fans, attempt to crash. Next thing you know, the pint-sized singer doled out relationship advice and sang a duet with Deschanel.

But viewers only got a taste of the funky duet. On Friday, Prince's band, 3RDEYE-GIRL, tweeted out a link to the full-length track. The song can be heard on YouTube.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Mercury is moving into your sign, and this will help you to come out of your shell, socially speaking. You'll suddenly want to schedule dinners with friends you haven't seen for a while. And you'll be ready to flirt with new acquaintances, too.

Aries March 21-April 19

It's important to get in touch with what you really want. Don't let other people influence your decisions about life and love. If your parents want you to be married with five kids by now, tell them to back off.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Don't let silly stuff harm your relationship. A moon opposition could create some mood swings, and you might feel more irritated than usual. But don't take your frustrations out on your sweetheart.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Your creative side is highlighted this week. You could decide to compose a romantic poem and slip it under your honey's pillow. Or you might arrange a sexy evening at a pricey hotel.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Mercury is heightening those mood swings. One minute, you're ecstatic about that person you've been dating. The next minute, you want to strangle him or her. Try to strive for balance.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Good deeds from the past are returning to you. The sun is bringing you positive karma. Maybe you helped a friend sort out a love relationship, and now you'll receive help at a time of need.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

A psychic moon is enhancing your intuition. If you sense that somebody is lusting after you, you're probably right. Or if you have a kinky dream, that might mean that person secretly has the hots for you.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

It's hard for you to deal with practical matters. You hate handling things like bills, chores and health issues. Pay more attention, because they could have a huge impact on your relationship.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Don't let people pull you into too many directions. You could have several guys or girls interested in dating you. The moon says take a moment to consider which engagements will truly bring you positive energy.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Your temper is high right now, thanks to a passionate moon. If your partner says he wants to "stay friends" with his ex and you hate her, you'll make demands. Or if your girlfriend lies to you, you'll want to confront her.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Mercury is making you extra sensitive. But don't take it personally if your honey can't make your date because he or she has to work late. This doesn't mean you're being rejected. Take a deep breath and relax.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You might find yourself playing the role of sexual teacher, courtesy of passionate Venus. Maybe you're dating someone super conservative or just inexperienced. It's time to share your warm, creative and sensual gifts.

Back to you, Cecily

'SNL' star hasn't lost sight of Chicago roots

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Cecily Strong says her sign-off with Colin Jost at the end of "Saturday Night Live's" Weekend Update is still a work in progress.

Strong and former co-anchor Seth Meyers blew kisses to the audience or gave each other a fist bump at the end of the segment during their half-season together. But with Meyers having left "SNL" to host his NBC late night talk show, the Oak Park-raised Strong would like to develop a new tradition with her new co-anchor.

"Being from this nerdy improv world of Chicago, I'm like, 'We've got to keep it organic,'" Strong said in a playfully whiny tone Wednesday at the Godfrey Hotel Chicago, where she celebrated her cover on the spring issue of Michigan Avenue magazine. "We did the E.T. 'ouch' because there was a Steven Spielberg reference (one week) and then we did the Matthew McConaughey surfer thing."

Strong said she came up with the idea to blow kisses with Meyers for her own personal amusement.

"It's something I did because I wanted to see a buttoned-up Seth Meyers blowing kisses."

On April 23, Strong will attend Planned Parenthood of Illinois' fourth annual Generations Celebration at Navy Pier's Grand Ballroom. She said she once worked at Planned Parenthood in Chicago in the corporate office.

The Second City and iO alum has since moved to New York, where she has been living for a year and a half. What's the most New York thing about her?

"I love to love eavesdrop and I love to jaywalk—that's very New York," Strong said.

And the most Chicago thing about her?

"Probably my awful accent, No. 1. My love for cheese. My love for hanging out and drinking. And I think there's a real Chicago thing, like 'C'mon ...' if someone is showing off," said Strong, giving her best side-eye expression. "Chicago is big on 'C'mon, buddy ...'"

Following her first season on "SNL," Strong was given the Weekend Update gig alongside the departing Meyers. She quickly went from being the Weekend Update rookie in September to the veteran by default this month when Jost made his debut.

"I think it was a lot tougher [for Jost]," Strong said. "He had to come in midseason and didn't have Seth next to him, who for years has made the person next to him look amazing. And I don't have that skill yet. I think he did so well—especially considering all that. I don't think he gets as nervous and anxious as I do. He's really lucky in that way. I think I feel anxiety for the both of us."

Lupita in space!

Lupita Nyong'o
REUTERS

What would help America's sweetheart Lupita Nyong'o avoid period-piece typecasting AND help her break the Best Supporting Actress curse AND make her zillions of dollars? The answer, as always, is "Star Wars." The "12 Years a Slave" actress met with J.J. Abrams and is being considered for the female lead in the latest installment of the sci-fi epic, thr.com reports. Please give her a light-saber. Please, please, please.

We want 'Mars'!

Some of the Marshmallows behind "Veronica Mars" are getting heated. A pocket of contributors who helped bankroll the movie through Kickstarter are not exactly pleased customers, taking to the fundraising site to lament their struggles in downloading their digital copy of the movie. Warner Bros., the studio behind the film, will provide refunds to frustrated funders who seek it, a representative confirmed.

Buckle up

Well, that was inevitable. Kevin Hart and Ice Cube will ride again in "Ride Along 2" on Jan. 15, 2016, Universal Pictures has announced. The follow-up to the hit buddy comedy will once again debut over the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday—the original opened to $48.6 million over the same weekend this year.

Hold up, Hannibal

Sigh. We KNEW it was too good to be true. Reports that Comedy Central has picked up Hannibal Buress' TV pilot are premature, the network said, according to vulture.com. "Unemployable," a reality series in which Buress spends each episode doing a new job, would be a huge, hilarious break for the Chicago native, so hustle for, TV execs.

THE DIGIT

$22M

That's how much "Mr. Peabody and Sherman" was estimated to have made over the weekend, according to variety.com, putting it in the top box-office spot. "Need for Speed" opened in second place, with about $18.5 million.
